April 11, 2017

Direct teacher planning is critical because the next scheduled non-teaching days on the upcoming school year’s calendar will best be used for self-study. It is important that we determine which of the 11 non-teaching days should be used for SLT and which should be used for teachers. We can only choose at this time because the rest of the year will be too busy. We do not need to make a decision about those days right now. This will help the SLT determine which of the 11 non-teaching days will be best used for self-study. The school year will end on May 5, so you can feel prepared and ready. Rise Up presents the End of Year Conversation Panel on Thursday, April 13 from 5pm to 7pm here. The panel will consist of community leaders, politicians, and law enforcement to serve our diverse community with relevancy. This conference will empower educators, students, and community leaders with teaching tools that embrace multiple perspectives for diverse learning. The REACH conference has previously empowered educators, students, and community leaders with teaching tools that embrace multiple perspectives for diverse learning.

Are you worried about the end of the year? We have a panel of teachers who will answer your questions about their current situations and experiences with regard to the topic of discussion planned for that session. We usually know a week or two out from the actual session. If you have a story to share on a given topic, like salary and extra duty pay, there are two ways to sign up. You can read all of our proposals here. We have finally set topics of discussion for this session, including our Wage Proposal, and I will give us a chance to hear all of them. We know you are busy with PARCC testing, so any school that invites us during this time will get a Donut Day when we visit!

Upcoming Visits:

Denver Public Schools

May 5, KOSI 101.1 FM will randomly draw two teacher names and both of those teachers will win an Appreciation Prize Pack with a teacher, just upload a picture of the teacher and a description of why s/he is deserving to the

March Pics








Renewals




César Chávez Day

March 30, Tuesday, April 4, Sprout Days on August 31, 2017!

October 17, 2017:

MAJOR EVENTS

Colorado REACH Conference

June 22 – 23, 2017:

Colorado BRICK Conference

June 25 – 27, 2017:

DCTA Connects to Your Community

Our Master Contract with EPS Expired in 90 Days on August 31, 2017!

Facebook Bargaining Events

Join the discussion and share your input by liking us on Facebook Bargaining Events.

Facebook Bargaining Events

Join the discussion and share your input by liking us on Facebook Bargaining Events.

Facebook Bargaining Events

Join the discussion and share your input by liking us on Facebook Bargaining Events.

Facebook Bargaining Events